RE: MB Docket No. 04-233

To Whom It May Concern,

I have been a listener to KLOVE 100.1 (Julian/San Diego) for many years. Even though the signal is not strong, I'm able to hear it in the car and on one radio in my home office. The majority of my radio listening is to KLOVE—about 50 hours a week.

KLOVE provides myself and the entire San Diego community, an alternative source for news and encouraging / wholesome music that is safe for the entire family. This is become scarcer in today's media environment.

I understand that KLOVE uses FM translator service for much of their network. There would be a significant hole in San Diego radio market if KLOVE were displaced by a Low Power FM broadcaster with different programming.

I strongly encourage the FCC not to displace any of KLOVE's FM translator stations by Low Power FM stations.

Best regards,
